Octogenarian of Makawao

Never Misses a Day, and Says
That Teaching Keeps Him
Hale and Hearty.

An octogenarian schoolteacher, still in the harness, would be hard to find, even in the most healthy portions of the world, says the Advertiser. Maui possesses such a one in the person of W. C. Crook, principal of Paia School, who resides at Makawao and whose age is eighty-two.

Rain or shine, in winter or summer, this wonderful old gentleman drives over five miles to his school, never missing a day, and appearing as sprightly in physique and intellect as the average man fifty years his junior.

Mr. Crook has been thirty years in Hawaii and for the last twenty years has been teaching school steadily. He has nine children living, five boys and four girls.

Speaking to an acquaintance who found him in his delightful old-fashioned garden the other day, among his favorite cypress and camphor trees, Mr. Crook stated that he attributed his remarkable mental and physical activity to the fact that he had always taken regular physical and mental exercise.

"I owe a great deal of my present physical and mental well-being to the fact that I have always been poor and unable to indulge in those luxuries which tend to enfeeble the body and faculties of humankind," said the veteran pedagogue. "As a youth I was a very fast runner and indulged in that exercise a great deal; in fact I do not remember ever having been beaten. Thirty years ago I could beat my son W. C. Crook, who was something of an athlete himself, in a sprint."

"I am a firm believer in the virtues of fresh air, sunshine, mental and physical exercise and temperance in all things. Held in proper regard they should see a man through to the age of a hundred years."

Mr. Crook stated that he was an abstainer because, after giving it a fair trial, he found that strong liquor did not agree with him. The same statement he made with regard to the use of tobacco, though he was a smoker for twenty years.

He eats a considerable quantity of vegetables, has fruit at every meal and never eats meat more than once a day.

"School teaching has helped me to keep fit," said Mr. Crook, with a twinkle in his eye, "for you see I'm never able to go off on a spree."

It is an inspiring sight to see this wonderful old gentleman walking about Makawao, stick in hand, as straight as an arrow, and with a glance as keen as a hawk's. To converse with him in the shade of his giant camphor trees, or hard by the avenue of spicy cypress, is an experience as instructive as it is pleasurable.

Will Make Boise Their Home.

After spending five years at Honolulu, Judge Ralph F. Quarles and family have returned to Boise to reside permanently.

"We are glad to get back to Boise," said Judge Quarles Tuesday, "the town has improved wonderfully since we left. The growth of the place seems more remarkable perhaps as we have not been here for five years."

"It was not my intention originally to remain away so long. I went to Honolulu for the benefit of my wife's health and my own. We decided then to stay two years, but I became interested in business ventures and it would have been a loss to leave at the end of two years. I have brought my family here, and they will stay, but I expect to return to Honolulu September 5. I have a number of cases in the circuit and supreme courts. It will require about three or four months to close up my affairs on and join my family."—Idaho Statesman.
